Achieving Success Infomercial Project

Dr. Knowitall's Achieving Success Infomercial

Achieving success in school can contribute to being successful outside of school as well as later in life.

Achieving success in school does not come easy to everyone. It takes work. Fortunately for you, you know the secrets to success. You know so much that you have been given the name Dr. Knowitall. You are called this, because you know it all when it comes to achieving success. Your friends, family and even some of your teachers come to you wanting to know what they can do to achieve success in school. To assist your peers and other interested parties, you and a partner decided to create an infomercial explaining how one can achieve academic success. You've titled your infomercial "Dr. Knowitall, Knows it All."

Choose at least 5 of the following concepts:

- Role of academic achievement in relationship to transitioning to high school
- Problems, concerns or obstacles that may prevent academic success in high school
- Strategies to improve academic performance (e.g. study skills, learning from reading skills, monitoring your learning, etc.)
- Importance of goal setting and effective decision making in preparing for and performing at the high school
- Reliable resources and or sources of information that will help you be successful (personal assets, adults, community, sources of reliable information)
- Strategies to manage your time
- Interpersonal and teamwork skills as well as, behaviors that are productive in school environment

Goals for Academic and Personal Success

For a limited time only you are giving the secrets away to your peers (your true audience) for free so you are encouraging everyone to get theirs while they can. You will have a 10th grade student as a consultant. Your final infomercial will be watched, validated and scored by your peers and a group of 10th grade students using the rubric attached.

Once you have viewed and learned from your own study and the Dr. Knowitall infomercials of your peers, complete a practical problem solving sheet called "what can I do to assure personal and academic success?" As you answer the question show you know it all by establishing a personal set of academic and personal success goals and ways to achieve the goals for the future.
